Concerned Blossom Lane residents find agenda a stumbling block - despite a sympathetic ear

Unlike the previous City Council meeting, when only one resident came to the meeting, last Monday's Council meeting was packed - primarily with residents opposed to the Highway 125 Ildica exit and the resulting increase in traffic it would generate in the Blossom Lane area.

Unfortunately, after sitting through almost half the meeting they were informed that the matter could not be discussed at that meeting because it was not an agenda item and the Brown Act prevents the Council from holding discussions or taking action on items which are not on the agenda.

So after presenting maps and letters to the Acting City Clerk, the chambers were nearly emptied. The Council did clarify two points for the group before they departed. First, they made it very clear that they have never been happy with the design modifications which eliminated the Troy/Palm access and the Jamacha Road access to Highway 125. And, secondly, they clarified for the group that the Council's choice of the Blossom Lane corridor was in response to CalTrans asking for their preference if there is only an Ildica access (as the current design shows).

The "Catch-22" that the Council finds themselves in is that the present design alternative with only Ildica access and the Blossom Lane corridor probably would result in the fewest number of lost houses. And, if more freeway interchanges are sought, it will probably impact more residents in the areas near the interchanges. The issue will become a political "hot potato" because there is no way of having greater access to the freeway without giving up land and houses. For instance, Golden Avenue, which had been threatened by the original plans, was saved by the current design. A return to the original concept, could again threaten this or other areas. And a similar group of outraged homeowners will be storming the council meeting looking to the council members to save their neighborhoods.

After hearing from the upset Blossom Lane residents and from several equally unhappy Spring Valley groups, CalTrans is seriously looking at other alternatives again, and has asked to meet with the Lemon Grove City Council in early January to discuss their findings. The Council told the Blossom Lane protestors that they would try to get CalTrans to make it an evening meeting so it would be convenient for more residents to attend.

In other matters, the Council heard an appeal by the owner of the convenience store and deli at 7977 Broadway, asking the Council to waive conditions attached to the issuance of a minor use permit regarding the sale and display of certain alcoholic beverages. Of greatest concern was the condition prohibiting the sale of distilled spirits in containers of less than 250 milliliters. Previously established liquor stores can sell these small "hip-flask" bottles, and prohibiting him to do likewise would put him at a competitive disadvantage and deprive him of about half of his liquor sales.

The Council heard from the owner's attorney, and opposition from various neighboring residents or business owners, as well as Karen Zautinsky of the Lemon Grove Prevention Project and Bob Reynolds, another professional in the alcohol abuse field.

After hearing the comments, the Council discussed the appeal amongst themselves and then resoundingly rejected the appeal. Some Council members expressed an interest in going even further - creating an ordinance against all sales of the "hip-flask" bottles by all stores in the city.

The Council also took up the matter of revisions to the Recreation Facility Use Regulations which had been adopted by the City Council last March. Staff recommendations were accepted with minor wording changes by a vote of 4-1, with Councilwoman Heiserman opposed to changes allowing liquor at the Senior Center.

The Council set hearings on Jan. 6 for the appeal of denial of an application to build a nine-unit condominium at 7654 Central; and Feb. 3 for a hearing regarding the revocation of a business license for Lemon Grove TV; and also Feb. 3 to hear a report and recommendation regarding AB939 Source Reduction and Recycling Element, with a Brown Bag meeting on Jan. 14 for a briefing on the contents of the preliminary plan prepared by the city's consultant, Camp, Dresser & McKee.

Injury at ribbon-cutting ceremony exposes design flaw in new walkway

City officials, Chamber of Commerce ambassadors and interested residents and business owners gathered Tuesday for the "Grand Opening" of the walkway from the city's new Lester Avenue parking lot to Broadway - but it suddenly turned out to be not such a "grand" celebration.

In preparing for the ribbon-cutting ceremony, Joyce Lazok, Chamber executive vice president, while in the area with tables talking with participants, turned to return to the parking lot, stepped around one person and failed to notice that she was stepping off one level to another and fell to the concrete - hitting her head.

As Lazok lay motionless on the ground bleeding from a gash on her eyebrow, more and more people were gathering for the ribbon-cutting. The paramedics came and put her onto a board and braced her neck (just in case she had injured her neck in the fall) just as her husband, Al Lazok, showed up for the ribbon-cutting ceremony. Al followed the ambulance to the hospital, where they put Joyce through a series of tests and took eight stitches in her eyebrow.

Fortunately, she appears to be making good progress, with one eye swollen shut and many bruises, aches and pains.

The ceremony, on the other hand, was anti-climatic, to say the least. The ribbon was cut and everyone left - wondering how Joyce was.

A yellow ribbon was placed in the walkway to prevent additional mishaps while the city goes back to the drawing board. There seemed to be a concensus that a railing should be placed along the split-level portion of the walkway.

Steiger's to host Chamber Sundowner

The December Sundowner for the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce will be at Steiger's Florist, 8057 Broadway, on Wednesday, December 11 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Those who wish to, may bring a gag gift for a gift exchange. But, either way, gift or no, come and share some holiday cheer with the Chamber.

There is no membership luncheon for December, and with Joyce banged up, there will be no newsletter for December. The Chamber office will be closed for a few days while Joyce recovers from her fall, but she can be reached at home - if it can't wait.

The board of directors and staff wish everyone a happy and prosperous holidays!

Helix and other crosses in jeopardy

A United States District Court decision on Tuesday, has declared the presence of the cross on Mt. Helix, on Mt. Soledad and on the official La Mesa insignia (worn by La Mesa Police, Fire Department and Animal Control personnel, used on La Mesa vehicles and on official literature) to be unconstitutional.

Deciding on three separate lawsuits pressed by La Mesa resident James Ellis, by John Murphy, and by Philip Paulson, Howard Kreisner and the Society of Separationists, Inc. questioning the presence of the cross on La Mesa's official city insignia, the Mt. Helix cross on county property, the Mt. Soledad cross on City of San Diego property, respectively, the court held "that the permanent presence and disposition of Latin crosses atop Mt. Helix, atop Mt. Soledad and on the La Mesa insignia are unconstitutional."

The court rejected La Mesa's argument that the cross upon the insignia was "meant to represent a well-known local feature identifiable with La Mesa" (the Mt. Helix cross). Although the court agreed in part that the Mt. Helix cross had "local historic significance," it deemed the cross "a profoundly

Taxpayer alert

County Assessor Gregory J. Smith announced recently that some property owners have received solicitations from a firm indicating that it would help them file the necessary forms in the hope of reducing their property taxes.

This company is charging $35 for work that can be done by the taxpayers themselves at absolutely no cost.

According to Smith, the Assessor's Office mails homeowners property tax exemption claim forms throughout the year whenever a deed is recorded transferring residential property, or, upon request of a homeowner. If the taxpayer owns and occupies the property as their principal place of residence, they may apply for a homeowner's exemption of $7,000 off their assessed value for an annual savings of approximately $70 on their property taxes.

To receive the full value of the exemption, the form must be filed with the Assessor's Office by April 15, or within 30 days of the mailing date on the notice of supplemental assessment.

Partial exemptions up to 80 percent my be allowed on the annual tax bill if filed by Dec. 1.

For more information, call the Assessor's Office at 531-5772.

B-Words Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

Thanksgiving Day

After that last morsel of pumpkin pie and the last sip of coffee, one always has to reflect upon the many things we have to be thankful for. With respect to the City of Lemon Grove as well as the Burns family, here goes ...

Thanks to Audrey Miller for introducing us to the Swimming Pool Association and the St. Johns family of friends ... To Vroman J. Dorman for all of his volunteer work in the civic projects early on in Lemon Grove ... To Max Goodwin for being the facilitator as well as an active participant in the development of neo-natal Lemon Grove and for introducing me to Kiwanis ... To Jack Durham and Thayer Crowe for welcoming me into the Club ... To Luther Hussey for demonstrating what the law was really like, and what I wish it were today ... To Arva Piepenbrink, Lois Burnworth and Nancy Swenson who brought us along in the altruistic affairs of our town ... Bill Miller's music will never be replaced in stimulating enthusiasm for the dances and carnivals to raise funds for the many good causes ... To Harry Griffin for his constructive opposition to incorporation early on, but more for his lifelong dedication to public service and true friendship ... Bob Swenson played the soul of the Pied Piper in an early parade and led the Kiwanis Baseball team to demolish the Lions Club at the Little League field. ... Frenchy Faucher bought the most tickets for the car raffle, and Pete Shea drew the lucky ticket.

Also, thanks must go to Byron Netzley and Bob Sutton, the two best school administrators that ever was, and the most civic-minded. Sam Skolleder was never far behind in any project that our little community put on for the public, and names like Louie Poluzzi, Hal Brogan, Harry Wiesgerber and Paul Reynolds were ever present as well. To Freeborn Cressy, a local shop owner, and Tony Sonka, Pete Miller and Al White, the old days were the now of their time and they were totally dedicated to the community.

More recently, after three futile tries at incorporation, it finally succeeded. Names like Thomson, Dell Lake, Jack Doherty and Dale Bailey have come to the fore. A second generation Dorman has been our mayor for lo' these 14 years, and our first woman councilmember, Lois Heiserman, has been seated. We only had Dan Kunkel for a short while, but it was truly time of pure value, and we miss him. A second-generation Lake is also with us in Craig, plus, a young, bright lawyer, Brian Cochran. Our Planning Commission has seen some fine members such as Ben Ela, Dan Hobbs, John Pipes and Warren Buckner. Our original Janny, who was our entire original staff, as been replaced by quite a number of additional staff persons, but I still miss her and I don't care who knows it.

I am very thankful that all of the things that we attempted to do as fledgling councilmembers turned out so well. I think it is remarkable that we were so luck and that we had such good people around us. The day that I opened the door of a hotel room in the Hotel Del Coronado and saw Jack Shelver standing there to be interviewed as a prospective city manager, I do not know how fortunate we were, and what a blessing it was that he eventually said "yes." Karen Thomson became our city clerk/treasurer, and then came Christine Taub, Jim Butler and Al Lynn as city staffers. I am thankful for everyone, and credit the good fortune of our city to them without reservation.

Thanks be to God, for everything.

Helix gridders bow to Point Loma

Grossmont 3A participation in the CIF football playoffs came to an abrupt end last Friday when Helix was shut out by Point Loma, 21-0.

The game was far closer than indicated by the final score, and hinged on a single fourth-quarter play. Trailing 7-0 with seven minutes left on the clock, Helix marched to the Pointers' four-yard line at which point, a Gregg Wilbur to Adam Bright pass was intercepted by Point Loma's Michael Driver, who galloped 98 yards for the clinching score.

The Highlanders, whose defense held the Pointers at bay through most of the game, lost several scoring chances through turnovers, including four interceptions and two fumbles. Helix thus finished its season 8-3-1, and had the satisfaction of going further in the playoffs than crosstown rival

Commentary

by Paul Treske December 7, 1941

For those of my age and generation, Dec. 7, 1941 was much more than just an historical date that would "live in infamy." It was THE formative event of our lives.

America was a strange world to inhabit in 1941. The war in Europe had been raging for two years and although we were a nation heavily united in opposition to Adolph Hitler, there was a powerful isolationist element here that continued to see WWII as Europe's war. It seemed enough that we were the "arsenal of democracy," manufacturing and shipping millions of tons of war equipment to England and the Allies without any of "our boys" being dragged into the shooting part of the war. It was also true that Japan was a militant, expansionist power, allied to the Axis and rattling her sabres in our direction. But, Japanese peace envoys were in Washington and actual war seemed, as yet, far away.

And, then we heard the news on that Sunday - each in our own place and manner - and the world was never the same again.

Our ninth-grade class joined the others in our school auditorium to hear President Roosevelt address Congress. We heard, first hand, that deathless phrase "a day that will live in infamy," and we heard with youthful awe as Roosevelt ended his speech by assuring us that "we will win the inevitable triumph, so help us God." And, then we were at war.

It was a quick end to American isolationism for the remainder of the century, at least. We WERE involved in Europe and Asia and would remain so until this time. Americans went to war with a vengeance and pacifism was something of a rarity. The enemy was clear and present and there was no national wavering or uncertainty as to their motives or the need to totally defeat them.

We were not always heroic; in our fear, which was real and palatable, we committed a terrible crime in interring Americans of Japanese decent. We were not always noble; war and profiteering were and have always been bed-mates. We were not always efficient; brave men were often needlessly lost through foolish and ill-planned military ventures. But we were dedicated to winning the war and to rescuing a world already decimated and enslaved and in this, we were united.

Relatives and friends went into the military and disappeared to remote corners of the globe. Flags with blue stars appeared in many family windows, to be often followed later by gold. My sister joined the Navy, as did several of my cousins. One disappeared from view and spent four years on the "Burma Road." Another cousin, a physicist, did not enter the military, but also all but disappeared into mysterious secrecy. Only much later, did we learn that he spent the war years working on the atomic project.

For those of us in high school, life became different immediately. There were blackouts and civil defense wardens. Rationing came, as did scrap metal drives and war bond rallies. Few of us had cars; they were no longer being made, and our elders were carefully preserving the old ones as well as meticulously alloting the few gallons per week of rationed gasoline to traveling to and from work. But, through it all, there was a sense of purpose and dedication that those of that generation have not experienced since.

As the war progressed from defeat after defeat to the beginnings of victory, loss became a part of our personal lives. Older classmates entered the military and our school, as well as our family, had "boys over there." And, then, we had our own first "gold stars" for friends and classmates killed in action.

Meanwhile, in our factories, women were a major part of the work force for the first time in our history. Special items such an nylon stockings or good cigarettes were either done without or obtained on the "black market." On screen, we watched John Wayne "win the war" in the Pacific and Errol Flynn defeat the Nazis in Europe. We followed maps that showed Allied forces on the move across the world, but at the cost of more, and still more, American casualties. Europe was liberated and we saw for the first time, pictures of the victims of Hitler's concentration camps. Russia was our friend and ally and men like Roosevelt and Churchill were far bigger than life.

After it finally ended in Europe, "the" bombs were dropped on Japan and the great war was over. But, we were never to be the same again. Isolationism was never to really return to the American view nor its place in the world. Women were never to merely return to hearth and home. They remained in the work force from that time on, drastically altering the nature of American life.

The existence of nuclear weapons was to forever change our concept of war, raising the ante even higher in the game of international "poker," and forcing the world to thereafter live in threat of instant obliteration.

The frustration of the ensuing Cold War, following so closely upon the euphoria of unity and victory, left a cloud of national cynicism from which we have never truly recovered.

The GI Bill enabled hundreds of thousands of returning soldiers to attend college - something which prior to 1941 had been reserved, primarily, for the rich. The concept of higher education for all who wanted it would become a permanent part of the "American way."

There were many more ways in which the nation changed after Dec. 7, 1941. We would never again leave ourselves so militarily unprepared as we were that day. We became the leading nation on earth - we faced off against the "Eastern Block" for what seemed an eternity of cold war, and accepted, unwillingly, the role of "policeman of the world" and our military budget became the country's moving force.

Whether any of these national changes is good or bad, is a subject for other commentaries. Suffice it to say, it has been a different world since the day the bombs fell on Pearl Harbor, and, at least for my generation, it was the day that cast the ultimate shape of our lives.

From Where I Sit

Recalling Pearl Harbor

by Frank Andrews

I can recall that historic December 7th, 1941 like it was just yesterday. That's true in my later life, I can remember events in the past but have trouble with current events. I guess it's old age creeping over me.

I was going to school and living in Cleveland, Ohio, at that time. The company had selected me from an interview and tests in Minneapolis for six months of training in the Cleveland suburb of Euclid. They found places for the students to live as boarders in nice private homes. There were about four guys besides myself in my particular home.

I can remember rising that Sunday morning to the radio news of the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor. I was only 18 years old and didn't realize the seriousness of the startling report. The Selective Service Draft, the rationing of critical materials, the many heartaches, and all the horrors of a world war were still unknown to me and a million others just like me.

I had given my little sweetheart back in Minneapolis an engagement ring early that spring but her mother, a most wonderful Swedish lady, wouldn't let her daughter wear the ring, let alone get married, until she was 18. I suppose that the war prompted our upcoming marriage but our well-meant plans were made nearly a year in advance. The company knew of my plans so they gave me a week's vacation to go home and tie the knot. I drove my 1937 60 H.P. Ford V8 nonstop from Cleveland to Minneapolis in record time. I was lonesome for my little Swedish "meatball."

Those Minnesota Swedes really know how to put on a wedding, especially the Smorgasbord and party that followed. The mother-in-law went all out for that "bash." We did as she wished, we waited. Her daughter was 18 on the 2nd of January so we waited until the 3rd of January.

We packed that little '37 Ford with all the neat wedding presents plus some housekeeping necessities, and left early the next morning for Cleveland, Ohio. The thermometer read 30 below zero and that was before the new "wind factor" stuff. The Ford had a "no good" manifold heater, so I had to switch my feet on the accelerator so my young bride could rub one foot at a time to keep from freezing. We were so young and unafraid of the cruel world into which we were driving.

My first assignment with the company after graduation, was Detroit, Michigan. Working in all of the defense plants in and around Detroit during the war was some experience.

The only hardship for my bride and I was the shortages and the rationing that was necessary. I drove my Ford on tires that should have been burned, but it taught me how to change a tire plus booting the casing and patching the tubes.

We struggled along until I found out that all my school mates and buddies were enlisting in some branch of the service. I quickly enlisted in the Navy Sea Bees and received a 3rd Class Petty Officer's rating from my experience and schooling. Because of a growth on my tailbone I was rejected and placed on 4F status. I later had an operation and re-enlisted in the Army Air Corp Cadet Program.

December 7th, 1941, the bombing of Pear Harbor, will be a day for all to remember as it affected nearly the entire world, some more seriously than others. I guess I was one of the less seriously affected ones so Thank You God for that.

Happy Holidays

by Joseph Walker

It's that time of year again.

You know what I mean. Or, do you?

Maybe I'm saying it excitedly, each syllable laced with joyful anticipation. Or, perhaps, I'm saying it right after a heavy, mournful sigh, with my head shaking sadly and my eyes rolling heavenward.

It's hard to know. The holidays affect us all so differently, and for different reasons. For some, it's the most wonderful time of the year. For others, it's a time of intensified loneliness. Still others consider it a constant source of aggravation, from the long lines at the mall to the crass commercialization of a day that should be sacred and introspective. And, others find everything about it distasteful - the weather, the financial strain, the pressure, the music, the TV specials, the decorations, the (shudder!) fruitcake.

Sometimes, our feelings about Christmas aren't influenced as much by philosophy as they are by circumstance. If things are gong well and we're looking at life through cranberry-colored glasses, there's a good chance we'll feel like celebrating come Christmas. But, the loss of a loved one, unemployment, family trauma and economic challenges can turn beloved yuletide traditions into painful memories.

Some of the above has taken the glow off the pre-holiday excitement around our house this year (if you don't count two-year-old Elizabeth, who turns inside-out every time she sees Santa on a commercial). But, we've come up with a few ideas that have helped us rekindle our enthusiasm for Christmas. Maybe, they'll help you, too.

1. Simplify. It's easy to get on that escalating sprawl of bigger, more elaborate holiday celebrations, isn't it? Each year, you feel the pressure of trying to top yourself in gift-giving, entertaining and decorating. So, stop playing the game. You know - "just say no." Give gifts that come from the heart, not the pocketbook. Allow your holiday entertaining to be about relationships, not showmanships. And, if you need an excuse for decorating the same way each year, call it "traditional" and forget about it.

2. Focus on feelings. As much as anything else, Christmas is a state of mind. Oh, sure - the presents and parties and decorations are part of it. But, when it comes right down to it, the thing that makes the holiday season unique is what it makes us feel. So, allow that to be the focus of your celebration. Do the things that make you feel .... well, Christmas-y: singing carols, visiting friends and family, sitting down with the family to watch "It's a Wonderful Life" for the 154th time - whatever. And, if that means you have less time to fuss with holiday stress ... well, so much the better.

3. Give of yourself. Give of your time, your attention, your talents, your love. A blind neighbor might appreciate having someone address her Christmas cards. A lonely man down the street might enjoy some company for an hour. The new family on the block might like to get acquainted with you. You'll be surprised how quickly the Christmas spirit comes when you're thinking of others more than yourself.

4. Start a new tradition. It doesn't have to be a big deal, just something you would like to make a regular part of your holiday routine. In our family, it's going to be a "Twelve Days of Christmas" project, where we're going to perform an anonymous act of service for neighbors each of the 12 days leading up to Christmas Day. You might prefer making a new decoration each year or sampling a new Christmas goodie. Just do something different to add a little spice to your holiday.

5. Make the world a better place in which to live. One of the themes of the first Christmas was "peace on earth, goodwill toward men," and it seems to me that this ought to be a theme for us, too. Granted, we're probably not going to stumble upon any solutions for tension in the Middle East. But, maybe we can make amends with someone we've offended, or find it in our hearts to forgive someone who has offended us. Perhaps, we can teach our children tolerance by attending a Christmas service with another faith group. Or, maybe, we can do our part for the environment by simply wrapping fewer presents (which, by the way, may save you a buck or two at the cash register.)

The point is, Christmas is whatever we choose to make of it. We can go with the flow and risk being swept away by flooding commercialism. But, if we decide to take action to make the holidays more meaningful for ourselves and our families, we may be surprised at how delightful the season can be - long lines, finances and fruitcake notwithstanding.

'The Nutcracker' staged by California Ballet Company has Lemon Grove connection

The California Ballet Company will present its 21st annual production of "The Nutcracker" this month in both Poway and San Diego.

The Poway Center for the Performing Arts will be the setting for the popular Christmas fantasy, Dec. 6 to 8. The San Diego Civic Theatre performances will feature a live orchestra, Dec. 13 to 15 and Dec. 18 to 22.

Guest dancers for this year's performances will be Mark Lanham, former principal dancer with Ballet West and the Royal Winnepeg Ballet; and Daren Savage, former principal dancer with the Milwaukee Ballet and Ballet Met of Ohio.

The Company's principal dancers include Denise Dabrowski of La Mesa. And Lemon Grove's Ryoko Tanabe is in the Corps de Ballet, and will be dancing major roles with the Company.

The original version of "The Nutcracker" was produced by the Russian Imperial Ballet in 1892. The famous French choreographer Petipa worked closely with the composer Tchaikovsky on the score, describing what he wanted, measure by measure.

Matinees (featuring "Sugar Plum parties") and evening performances will be offered in both locations. California Ballet is dedicated to providing a forum for top local talent and professional dancers to develop and maintain their artistic skills.

Tickets are available by calling the California Ballet at 560-6741 or TicketMaster at 278-TIXS.

Helix cross unconstitutional

religious symbol," and declared that the cross "contributes to an appearance of government religious preference sufficient to render unconstitutional its presence in a public park."

According to the court papers, James Ellis, the sole plaintiff in the La Mesa insignia case, is a "religious Episcopalian" who is "deeply offended by the expenditures of taxes for insignias depicting a religious symbol" and that Mr. Ellis is "particularly troubled by the way in which the insignia associates Christianity with the police department. He believes that it symbolically tells people who are Christians that they are welcome or favored...and...tells people who are not Christians that they are outsiders or less than welcome."

La Mesa City Manager David Wear stated that the city has no official position or response at this time, but will take up the issue at the Dec. 17 council meeting at which time legal options will be discussed in closed session.

The sole plaintiff in the Mt. Helix case is identified as John Murphy, a Catholic, San Diego County resident who "is offended by the use of public property and the expenditure of public money to display and illuminate the cross on Mt. Helix."

County Supervisor George Bailey's chief of staff, Dana Quittner, said that Supervisor Bailey believes that the community has made it clear that it doesn't want the cross on Mt. Helix removed and that he will fight to keep it there. Bailey hopes to find an option whereby the county could deed the land under the cross to a private, non-profit entity which could legally maintain the cross.

Judge Gordon Thompson, Jr. gave the defendants three months to comply with his ruling.
